

This paper brings together information about the needlemaking trade that was an important and thriving industry in the lower Arrow Valley from the mid-17th century until the end of the 20th century.

This document was published originally in 1981 as occasional paper 24. This was prepared by Edward Saville, who founded the Society, with contributions from Richard Churchley.

The text has been edited to include new information that has become available and the photographs and figures have been updated. The editor of the new edition is Richard Churchley.

“Needlemakers in Alcester, Sambourne and Studley” has been printed on heavyweight paper with full colour covers and costs £3.00.

© Alcester and District Local History Society